As the major centre for a catchment area of some 200,000 people, Tamworth is one of most progressive and innovative regions in NSW. The region has a strong reputation for its quality of life for its residents, supported environment for business and industry and economic opportunities for investors.

Ideally situated on the main inland route between Victoria and Queensland for freight logistics, there are three major airlines providing daily flights to Sydney and Brisbane, along with daily train and bus services. From city living to country retreats, the region boasts quality and diverse shopping, education, health services and sporting facilities in an affordable and supported community.

Offering a range of quality employment opportunities, the region fosters entrepreneur growth, research development and continuous learning throughout its industry sectors and community. An emerging creative industry is fostered through a range of events such as the internationally recognised Tamworth Country Music Festival, art galleries, museums, Tamworth Regional Conservatorium of Music and strong key industry sector growth.

Alongside a vision and execution, partnerships and collaboration underpin the Tamworth region. The region's positive "can do" attitude is reflected in the continuous investment in large scale infrastructure projects, the diversity and quality services, and new residents moving to the region.

New Resident Information

There are many reasons for relocating to the Tamworth region.

The Tamworth region is one of the most rapidly growing inland areas of NSW. The region has a population of over 57,000, with over 40,000 in Tamworth city and another 10,000 people living within 20km of the city centre. The towns of Manilla, Barraba, Nundle and Kootingal along with another 17 hamlets and villages and rural areas make up the region.

The region offers attractive employment and business opportunities as well as affordable housing. There is a range of educational and training options for families, career and personal development. A huge range of facilities, including the iconic Australian Equine and Livestock Events Centre, cater for sports from AFL through paragliding to water polo. As well as agribusiness, there is a vibrant retail sector. The thriving arts and cultural community are well supported by theatres such as the new Capitol Theatre, museums and the Tamworth Regional Conservatorium of Music, which is the second largest regional conservatorium in NSW. In addition to the local hospitals servicing the region, Tamworth has a Base Hospital with a 24 hour emergency department, specialist units and established links to tertiary hospitals in Newcastle and Sydney.

Education

Education Fact Sheet

Existing facilities, such as the public and private school network, UNE Study Centre, Regional Conservatorium of Music, BAE Flight Training Australia, Australasian Pacific Aeronautical College, the University Department of Rural Health and Rural Clinical School, the Northern Inland Academy of Sport and TAFE NSW New England Institute provide a core base of education and training providers within the Region. Opportunities to further develop links with institutions such as the Armidale UNE campus and associated research and development initiatives will assist in building and developing the education industry within the Tamworth Region. Significant opportunities also exist to leverage the Tamworth Region's iconic facilities, such as the Australian Equine and Livestock Events Centre \(AELEC\), to develop targeted equine training programs.

Fast Facts

The education and training industry represents 7.5% of the Tamworth Regional economy contributing an estimated $130 million to GRP in 2006-2007, reflecting 13% growth on the previous year.

Education has been the fastest growing sector for the Region over this period, well above the growth in the education and training sector experienced by the state (6.4%).

The proportion of total students attending all types of institution has increased by 5.1% since 2001 to 16,034 students.

For adult education, community education, early childhood and primary education there is limited competition due to locational constraints where Tamworth is the primary service centre in the Region. Tamworth has a secure market demand for consumers that is based primarily on population size and growth and age demographics that drive demand for these levels of education.

AELEC

The $30 million Australian Equine and Livestock Events Centre (AELEC), opened in September 2008, is one of Tamworth Regional Council's most significant achievements.

The AELEC, designed to enhance Tamworth as NSW's leading equine region, took 15 months to build. Council contributed over $20 million through council cash and reserves and loan funds, with the balance coming from Federal and State Government grants.

The AELEC has already attracted international attention for its design and its facilities, and has hosted a range of events, including state and national titles.

The centre consists of a two-level main stadium; an indoor arena with tiered seating for 3,360; concourse areas for exhibition and trade; multi-functional corporate and VIP areas; hospitality and entertaining amenities areas; offices; and viewing and broadcasting facilities. An interconnected sales ring doubles as a warm-up arena seating 560.

Additional facilities include undercroft stock holding yards; six blocks with 478 stables, wash bays, laundry and bathroom facilities; and an education and training building including a lecture theatre. The outdoor grounds also provide for a campdraft arena, two warm-up arenas, horse sporting fields, undercover cattle yards, show jumping and dressage, truck parking bays, a truck wash and lawn areas.

Tamworth Regional Council plans further staged development of the AELEC, including more stables, increased stadium seating, and two additional wings to the stadium which would house a restaurant and an exhibition hall containing a heritage hall of fame.

Council will continue to involve horse and livestock groups in the ongoing development of the AELEC.
